Analytical Chemistry, The University of Memphis. The Department of Chemistry invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position in Analytical Chemistry to start August 2010. The appointment is expected to be at the Assistant Professor level. The successful candidate will be expected to establish a vigorous, innovative, externally funded research program, recruit and attract graduate students, and teach analytical chemistry at the graduate and undergraduate levels. Preferred candidates will have a proposed research program that complements existing activities in the department. Applicants must have a Ph.D. in chemistry. Post-doctoral experience is highly desirable. Applicants should apply on-line at <http://workforum.memphis.edu> by uploading a curriculum vita, a description of proposed research with details of equipment needs, undergraduate and graduate transcripts, and email contact information for three professional references. Screening of applications will begin November 16, and the search may remain open until the position is filled. The University of Memphis is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer.
