Developing Champions
Themed Learning Community

This course examines various approaches to conceptualizing, interpreting, and operationalizing social justice and leadership. Skills include: risk-taking, problem-solving, dealing with conflict, collaborating with others, etc. Students will analyze how they responded to the situations and how their own leadership skills have developed or could develop further through engagement and career success.

This course will help students to understand the role of the leader as an agent for positive outcomes, through their participation in Intercollegiate Athletics, on campus, and in the community.

OPEN TO FRESHMEN STUDENT-ATHLETES

“We hope our incoming student-athletes will become people who use leadership as a means to help others. We want them to draw on the strengths of others, and to be led whenever appropriate. It is our expectation that being a part of this TLC will help them better understand their natural attributes and to learn about the most effective ways to use their leadership skills in the classroom, in competition, and in life.”

-Sean T. Frazier
Associate Vice President/Director of Athletics
