In the law schools

Clanitra L. Stewart has joined the library faculty at Northern Illinois University College of Law as a reference and instructional services librarian and assistant professor.

She provides legal reference assistance to faculty, students and other library users. In addition, she teaches a legal research class at the school.

Before joining NIU, Stewart practiced at the South Carolina Appleseed Justice Center, where she provided local and statewide policy advocacy on behalf of low-income communities in the areas of affordable housing, homelessness, hunger and community economic development.

Prior to that, she was an attorney at the Georgia Legal Services Program, representing indigent clients in civil cases.
