

CERTIFICATE OF GRADUATE STUDY IN LAW AND WOMEN'S STUDIES

The College of Law and the Graduate School have approved a Certificate of Graduate Study in Law and Women's Studies. Course work leading to this certificate permits study of the intersection of gender and the law through a systematic engagement with feminist theory, scholarship on women and gender, and legal scholarship. Completion of the certificate requirements results in recognition on the student's transcript. The certificate is available to students in good standing in the College of Law or in any graduate program in the university. Students-at-large in good standing may also pursue the certificate. Faculty who regularly teach courses which contribute to the certificate come from a variety of departments and colleges.

Law students interested in pursuing this certificate are advised to consult with the associate dean of the College of Law for further information.

Requirements (12 credits):

With the approval of the director of the Women's Studies Program, independent study and topics courses in a variety of departments may meet the certificate requirements when substantial treatment of law and women's studies is included in the course. Non-law students may register for LAW courses only with approval of the associate dean of the College of Law.
