- Fundamentals of English Grammar (3)  ENGL 207 *
- Advanced Essay Composition (3)  ENGL 300
- Three additional courses at the 300-400 level (9)

* Students with a major or minor in English must demonstrate competence in the fundamentals of English grammar by successfully completing ENGL 207 or by passing an examination. Those who pass the grammar exemption exam will not receive 3 hours of academic credit; therefore, they must select some other English class (taken at NIU or elsewhere) to satisfy this requirement. Those who pass the examination should see an advisor to make the appropriate substitution.
This booklet contains descriptions of undergraduate (110 through 497) courses to be offered by the Department of English in the fall semester 2021. The arrangement is by course and section number. While every effort will be made to abide by the information given here, some last-minute changes may be unavoidable. Check the MyNIU website and the bulletin board outside of RH 214 for up-to-date information.

Registration

For fall 2021, registration for most English courses is not restricted to majors and minors. However, honors classes, directed study, internships, and educator licensure courses require permits from the Undergraduate Office. If you intend to register for 491 Honors Directed Study or ENGL 497 Directed Study, you must have a proposal form signed by the instructor and the Undergraduate Director before you will be given a permit. Proposal forms for departmental honors may be picked up in RH 214, and proposals should be approved before the start of the semester. Forms for university honors are available at the University Honors Program office, CL 110.

Grammar Competency Requirement

English majors and minors must demonstrate competence in the fundamentals of English grammar by passing an exemption examination, or by successfully completing ENGL 207 Fundamentals of English Grammar.

General Education Courses

- ENGL 110 - Literature and Popular Culture
- ENGL 350 - Writing Across the Curriculum
- ENGL 361 - Literature of Health Care

Honors Courses/Sections

Description:
Immigrant Voices and the Journey to Find Belonging in America
Discover the complexity of America and its promise through the eyes of immigrants. Transcending race, ethnicity, gender, and socioeconomic status, this asynchronous course examines a wide spectrum of texts that demonstrate how new arrivals seek acceptance in America’s mainstream culture. Students will engage in online discussions and exercises, write essays, and create projects to understand what immigrants experience when making America their home.

Requirements:
- Three short essays
- Final research project
- Discussion board interactions as well as weekly free-write exercises to correspond with assignments
- Attendance of brief, TBA online class sessions is strongly encouraged.
- Participation is required through the completion of graded assignments and weekly Blackboard activities.
- Texts to be supplied via Blackboard

Description:
In this course we will focus on imaginative literature about health care, disease, and medicine from a wide range of places, genres, and time periods. How do writers explore some of the many complex issues entailed in health care? What effects do social, cultural, and other contexts have on the depictions of those who practice medicine and those who are practiced on? We will look at short stories, poems, graphic texts, memoirs, and plays in this course, and consider some of the ways in which stories and storytelling are essential patients, family members, and health-care professionals.

Requirements: Written assignments for the course include participation in an online weekly discussion board debate, two short papers, one longer paper, one team project, and a final exam. Our online synchronous class discussions will also be lively and engaging.

Description:
An introduction to the reading of literary works, with attention to the writing of college-level essays on literature. The course focuses on the elements of literature, and aims to acquaint students with critical terminology. Works to be studied come from various periods of British and American literature.

Course goals:
-- familiarizing yourself with the conventions of academic writing about literature;
-- gaining experience in reading and thinking about sophisticated literary works; and
-- improving your writing.

Requirements:
Final exam (no midterm), weekly reading quizzes, four essays (3-5 pp.), plus discussion boards.

Description:
In this class we think, talk, and write about literature. Becoming an astute reader and thinker-about-lit requires the understanding of the techniques and approaches to literature, both intrinsic and extrinsic, as well a desire to consider the complexities of being human in the world. We’re going to sample some fabulous literature, discover ways of entering the works, write significantly and clearly about some texts, and familiarize ourselves with terms to assist our understanding. Responsibilities include reading responses, midterm, final. Attendance is mandatory.

Requirements:
Regular class attendance and participation, thoughtful reading and critical/interpretive reading responses, exams.
207 – Fundamentals of English Grammar

Description:
An introduction to modern English grammar from a linguistic perspective. This course is designed to make the student thoroughly familiar with the rules of writing prescriptively correct and stylistically effective English as well as with the terminology relevant for the grammatical structure of written English. We will use the analytic tools of modern descriptive linguistics in order both to critique and to make clear the sometimes inconsistent and vague rules of prescriptive grammar. Lectures will cover all relevant grammatical structures and identify discriminating use of grammar and language, such as sexist use of pronouns or racist use of passives. The student will gain a variety of analytic skills that will be of use in the production and discussion of not only expository prose but also literary prose and verse. Such analytical skills are also transferrable to any field of study and practice. The course aims to empower students in their academic and professional lives. A part of this course is dedicated to discussions on sociolinguistic implications of language use: the relationship between language at large as well as specific grammatical structures and racism, sexism, and other discriminatory social attitudes. Students participate in discussions on Discussion Board on blackboard on topics including but not limited to passive voice and racism/sexism, pronoun use and sexism, prescriptive grammar and racism, linguistic racism, accent and prejudice.

Although this is a synchronous online course, students who cannot attend synchronous class lectures can still take the course and succeed because class lectures are videorecorded to be viewed asynchronously for students who cannot attend synchronous classes, and weekly office hours, review sessions and individual appointments are offered to assist students.

Requirements:
Weekly assignments, quizzes, discussion board participation, and three exams.

Texts (required):

261X – Language, Mind and Thought

Cross listed as ANTH 261X and ILAS 261. Functioning of the human mind from the perspectives of anthropology, computer science, linguistics, neuroscience, philosophy, and psychology. Description:
This course introduces theories of cognition from the perspective of multiple disciplines, including linguistics, computer science, psychology, philosophy, and anthropology. We will discuss the structure and processes of the human brain, focusing on language as a central issue in cognition. We will consider language and cognition from the point of view of computer science and artificial intelligence, and ask to what extent human intelligence can be modeled on a machine. Students will acquire an appreciation for the different disciplinary approaches and how they complement each other. Mixed synchronous/asynchronous.

Requirements: Four exams

Text (Required): Jose Luis Bermudez, Cognitive Science: An Introduction to the Science of the Mind (required)

300A – Advanced Essay Composition: General

Writing expressive, persuasive, and informative essays and developing appropriate stylistic and organizational techniques. Open to majors, minors, and non-majors.

Description:
Advanced Essay Composition, an intensive writing course, will give you the opportunity to improve your writing skills. Please note that we will NOT do creative writing. Nor will this class focus on grammar (207 does that). Enrolling in this course means that desire to refine your skills to craft concise, precise, and elegant prose. The class utilizes small group workshop and whole class discussion during which you will critically and constructively comment on papers by professionals and peers. Prepare to give and receive constructive criticism, to listen with an open mind, and to use your best judgment.

Requirements:
You will meticulously plan, write, and revise five projects: from a resume to an academic argument.

301 – Writing Poetry I

Beginning course in writing poetry.
Section 0001  |  Day and Time  |  Location  |  Faculty
--- | --- | --- | ---
TTh 3:30-4:45 pm  |  RH 201  |  Newman

Description:
An introductory class in the craft and discipline of writing poetry, the workshop will focus on the study of poetry and, though intensive poetic practice, to work toward developing poetic voice. This is a writing course, not a course in light verse or children’s verse, spoken/slam/performance, or song lyric. You’ll read widely, studying and applying poetic techniques including image, metaphor, line, and stanza, and examine a number of traditions, including the sonnet, and the villanelle. You will read and respond to a number of books and essays, write poems, continually revise these outside of class toward the final project.

Requirements:
Response papers to weekly assignments in reading and writing, poetry drafts, regular attendance, thoughtful balanced critique participation, application of reading material to your own work and to other’s works, revision, exams, portfolio.

Texts: Poems and books of poetry TBA

---

302 – Writing Fiction I

Beginning course in writing fiction.

| Section  | Day and Time  | Location  | Faculty
--- | --- | --- | ---
Section 0001  |  M 6:00-8:40 pm  |  RH 205  |  Libman

Description:
Students write literary fiction developed from prompts. Work is shared and discussed in workshop, with students honing skills through experimentation, revision, and positive criticism. Each student will write one main story and revise that story based on feedback. Students also write weekly exercises and response letters. Genre writing is discouraged.

Texts: Workshops are electronic-free environments, so students should expect there will be a fair of amount of printing each week. Books: Le Guin, Steering the Craft, and Johnson, Jesus’ Son

Section 0Y02  |  Asynchronous  |  Online  |  McNett

Description:
In this course we examine the theory and craft of literary fiction, then apply what we've learned to our own written exercises, short stories, and the critique of these original pieces in a workshop format. One 6-10 page story is required for workshop, as well as weekly written exercises and responses to peers' work and published stories. Attendance and participation are important parts of the course grade.

Texts: TBA
303 – Writing Creative Nonfiction

Writing informal and formal nonfiction essays, emphasizing a literary approach to language and flexibility of form. Essay models include memoir, personal essay, nature essay, segmented essay, and travel essay, and may include biography and history.

Description:
Introductory creative writing workshop in the essay. We’ll read personal essays spanning centuries, discussing a first-person voice that combines autobiography, dramatizing, and reflection, and you’ll draft your own essays. Crucial to your success in the course is a commitment to thorough and reflective reading, in-class exercises and drafting, revision, and active participation in a generous and serious workshop environment.

Requirements:
Regular class attendance; full preparation for workshops; three personal essays (approx. 15-20 pages total); regular reading responses; one critical/interpretive essay (approx. 5-7 pgs.) at end of semester

Texts: The Art of the Personal Essay, Phillip Lopate, ed., and various essays

305 – Principles of Writing Literary Criticism

Composing essays on literary works based on readings in literary theory. Applying literary theories, critical methods and modes, principles of evaluation, appreciation, and interpretation.

Description:
In this class, we will explore what professional literary scholars really do—and then produce some professional literary criticism of our own. We will engage with such areas, issues, and skills as research, reviewing scholarship, defining an original contribution, the revision process, and presentation. Together, we will establish an inclusive and supportive community of scholars. For additional details, about the class, please e-mail Professor Ryan at tryan@niu.edu.

Requirements:
The primary product of the semester will be a professional “conference paper”: the result of an extensive process of development, workshopping, and revision. We will also present our papers in the style of a professional academic conference at the end of the semester. Other requirements include attendance and participation in our twice-weekly class sessions and contributions to peer-review workshops.

Ideally, you will bring to the class a pre-existing critical paper on literature (or film) that you have written for another college-level English class, but this is not a prerequisite.

Required Texts:
Carson McCullers. The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter. 1940. Mariner, 2004. (Hard copy preferred, but this novel will also be available for free as an e-book PDF). Other texts will be available as electronic reserves on Blackboard.
308 – Technical Writing

Principles and strategies for planning, writing, and revising technical documents common in government, business, and industry (e.g., manuals, proposals, procedures, newsletters, brochures, specifications, memoranda, and formal reports). Topics include analysis of audience and purpose, simplifying complex information, document design, and project management.

Description:
ENGL 331 surveys the celebrated literatures of America’s Romantic Age. Balancing between the idealist and the ominous, our course spans Romantic standards – from E.A. Poe to Walt Whitman – while also reading rich sources authored by Native American and West African writers, studying texts composed in Arabic as well as Algonquian languages. Reflecting on the linguistic and literary diversity of the early nation, ENGL 331 culminates with sustained treatment of America’s 19th-century epic, Herman Melville’s Moby-Dick.

Evaluation:
1) Reading Responses: 20%
2) Thesis Draft: 10%
iii) Final Paper: 35%
iv) Final Examination: 35%

Texts:
All assigned texts for ENGL 331 will be provided to students via PDF handouts and/or online links posted to our course’s Blackboard website.

Description:
Writing Across the Curriculum familiarizes students with the written forms and conventions of their academic disciplines and helps them develop the professional writing skills required for success in their intended fields. The course is primarily in workshop format and involves a combination of individual and group assignments.

- Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:
  - Analyze issues that interconnect human life and the natural world
  - Demonstrate critical, creative, and independent thought
  - Communicate clearly and effectively
  - Collaborate with others to achieve specific goals
  - Use and combine quantitative and qualitative reasoning
  - Synthesize knowledge and skills relevant to their majors and apply them to an innovative outcome

Recommended prerequisites:
A grade of C or better in English 203 or 204, basic research skills, basic skills in reading and summarizing professional prose, and basic computer skills with Word, Blackboard, and PowerPoint.

Description:
English 377 seeks to describe the range of American poetry written in the twentieth century and, now, the beginning of the twenty-first century. Such a project demands an understanding of Modernism and Postmodernism in American poetry. It also demands an engagement with trends that escape, or cut across, these categories: the persistence of the “genteel” tradition; the “New Negro” Renaissance; the Beats; and recent trends in multiculturalism. Throughout the course, close readings of individual poems will be counterpointed by explorations of the cultural, social, and political contexts of American poetry.

Requirements:
Class attendance and active participation in class discussion; regular journal writing; a group presentation; one shorter and one longer essay; midterm and final exams.

Possible Texts:

Description:
- English 381c will survey African American literature and film from its beginnings to the contemporary moment. Students will develop analytical reading and thinking skills, trace the themes, recognize the range of writing by African American authors, and explore how historical moments impact authors. Students will read poetry, short stories, novels, a play, and film (where appropriate). The class will meet face-to-face and will consist primarily of small and large class discussion and activities.

Requirements:
- Students will take on-line quizzes on the reading materials before class, annotate shorter texts in Hypothes.is, complete unit exams, and write 2-3 analytical papers. Effort, regular attendance, and constructive participation will be key to success.

Text(s): required or optional
- Tentative novels & play: Their Eyes Were Watching God; The Hate You Give; The Piano Lesson, and A Lesson before Dying.

All other texts will be available on Blackboard as Word or PDF documents.

383/383H – Gay and Lesbian Literature: Modern Global LGBTQ+ Drama

Description:
Modern Global LGBTQ+ Drama

In this course we will focus on plays written by, and about, members of the LGBTQ+ community from around the world. What stories do they tell about what it means to be human in these rapidly-changing times? What purposes does the genre of “drama” serve? We will explore a wide range of dramatic works from a broad range of geographical, social, and cultural contexts to unpack some of the questions and issues that playwrights engage with in both writing and performance.

Requirements:
Written assignments for the course include participation in an online weekly discussion board debate, two short papers, one longer paper, one team project, and a final exam. Our online synchronous class discussions will also be lively and engaging. Honors students will replace their longer paper with an interest-specific project.

Description:
Participants in the class will examine theory, research, and practice in the teaching of writing for students in middle schools and high schools. Participants will evaluate a variety of approaches to teaching writing with diverse student populations and in a variety of classroom settings. Students will create, co-create, and evaluate lessons for teaching various kinds of writing. Participants will study ways to connect literature and writing, help students learn how to interpret and write about literature, and how to use technology to help students think, read, and write.

Requirements:
The course requires regular attendance, the completion of assigned readings, and preparation for active participation in class discussions and demonstrations. The series of short papers require responses to the readings and case studies and the synthesis of thought about the instructional issues explored in class. Each class participant will prepare instructional plans that will support clinical experiences.

Our study will include clips from film versions and adaptations of his plays. We will attend to influences on his writing, including theatrical, political, and religious factors in Shakespeare’s England, as well as the significance of the hot new technology of his day: the printing press.

Requirements:
Two essays, a group project, some homework assignments, and class participation.

Optional Textbook:
William Shakespeare, The Complete Works [The Complete Pelican Shakespeare], general editors Stephen Orgel
(If you’d prefer, instead of purchasing a printed anthology of all of Shakespeare’s plays, you can purchase printed or eBook editions with scholarly notes of the specific plays that we cover, as we will discuss in class.)

Description:
The period covered by this course is a long one: from 1660 to 1789. Rather than trying to survey everything superficially, we will focus on a few key works and authors, representing poetry, drama, fiction and other genres during the period. Literary language and literary conventions will be our primary concern.

Course goals:
-- acquiring some familiarity with a main period of British literature; and
-- improving your writing.

Requirements:
Final exam (no midterm), weekly reading quizzes, four or five essays (3-5 pp.).

Description:
We will study the so-called “Romantic period” in British literature, 1780-1830, with the requisite emphasis on the poetry and prose of Blake, Wordsworth, Wollstonecraft, Coleridge, Keats, the Shelleys, Smith, and Byron.
Though we will read two novels, beware! Unquestionably, this is chiefly a poetry course. Our aims will be to acquire a fairly comprehensive and sympathetic working knowledge of the era’s defining claims and concerns as well as to explore some of the critical, in the lay sense of the term “critical” (less sympathetic and more unfavorable), attitudes towards them that have emerged in recent years. Those chief Romantic claims and concerns include, among others, the following:
- the unacknowledged but crucial role of the poet in society;
- the vital, moral, ethical, etc., significance of poetry and art;
- the nature of aesthetic experience (most especially the beautiful and the sublime);
- the relative virtues of the imaginative, the fanciful, and the rational;
the nature of the natural, itself;
the cult of the child;
the worth of the individual life;
the beauty and worth of the common and the humble (man, woman, “idiot boy,” animal, bird, thorn tree, fly, “clod and pebble”);
the limitations of Christianity;
the triumph of life (Shelley).

In addition to a good deal of reading, you will also do a fair amount of writing, both informal and formal; the more formal assignments I will read carefully and comment upon pointedly. Thus an ancillary aim of the course will be to provide you with opportunities to build what the rhetorician Steven Mailloux calls “rhetorical power.”

Requirements:
1. (20%) Reports: two five- to seven-minute monologues that, if constructed appropriately, will lead to good discussion;
2. (20%) Squib: a five-page “close” analysis of some significant episode in one of our texts (I have an elastic sense of “episode”); the due-date will be specified on the schedule;
3. (20%) Essay-exams: an after-mid-term take-home essay-exam in two parts (two two-page essays; see the schedule for due dates); the due-dates will be specified on the schedule;
(40%) Paper: still “close” but more substantial (12+ pp.) and more critically engaged; it will be due the M of exam week.

This class will meet with ENGL 646

Description:

This course equips prospective teachers with the procedures for the planning and delivery of instruction related to the reading and analysis of literature for students in middle school and high school. Participants will study the competing approaches to the study of literature and the diverse perspectives that influence critical judgment, and will plan experiences that will involve adolescent learners in joining the conversations about the interpretation and evaluation of texts. Course participants will work with a variety of literary genres and literary environments, and examine both the texts that are most commonly taught in middle schools and high schools and other texts of high literary merit that are under-represented in the schools.

Requirements:
The course requires regular attendance, the completion of assigned readings, and preparation for active participation in class discussions and demonstrations. The series of short papers require responses to the readings and case studies and the synthesis of thought about the instructional issues explored in class. Each class participant will prepare instructional plans that will support clinical experiences and student teaching.

Texts (required):

This class will meet with ENGL 648

Description:
English 480A prepares prospective teachers of middle and high school students for the contemporary English language arts classroom. The class draws from current theory, research, and practice related to the teaching of English. Students will have several opportunities to apply theory and research in practical, concrete ways. English 480A serves prospective teachers in two general ways: to assist candidates in continuing the transformation from student to professional English language arts teacher and to develop the knowledge base that will serve as the foundation for successful application of pedagogical knowledge and skills. In addition, candidates will become familiar with the academic language and expectations of the Stanford/Pearson Teacher Performance Assessment (edTPA).

Requirements:
The course requires regular attendance, readings from the required texts, reflective statements about the readings and discussions, collaboration on instructional activities and assessments, thorough instructional unit plans, appropriate progress on the teacher licensure portfolio, and the completion of the final examination.
