Key Concepts
- Behavioral concerns, especially sudden or significant changes, can be indicative of personal, emotional, & psychological problems. Student behaviors may be disruptive to your class, and cause you to have concern for the well-being and safety of your students and yourself.

- Remember to stay calm, supportive, and professional.

- Although you may be reluctant in seeking the services of the CCS for a number of reasons, it is best to consult with these services early.

Next Steps
Add the Crisis intervention information to your teaching notes. It is available 24 hours a day. During the day call CCS at 815-753-1206, and after hours call University Police at 815-753-1212 to reach the CCS on-call counselor.
