This course is sponsored by the University Honors Program as a JHE (Junior Honors Experience). The class will be seminar style with a strong emphasis on discussion format. JHE’s are intended to be suitable for Honors students in any major; however, by design, they require a serious investment on the student’s part. This particular course will be a hybrid, combining expertise of professors in the History and Communication Studies department.

Learning Outcomes
If students participate in class consistently, complete all assignments, and generally fulfill the requirements of the course, they can expect that they will improve their critical reading and analytical writing skills, improve their ability to engage in critical discussions of texts and television, further their ability to communicate clearly and concisely, and acquire new knowledge of medieval social and political history. Students will also develop sophistication with current developments in long form television production, exhibition, and consumption.

Note Concerning Types of Credit Available for HIST 490B HON
Please note the following concerning HIST 490B HON Special Topics in History: Medieval: If you wish to take this course for credit toward your history major, HIST 490B will fulfill the A Group requirement for the major as well as serve as one of your two required 400-level courses. HIST 490B HON can also count as one of the electives for a History Minor or a Medieval Studies Concentration.

Required Reading
All readings will be available as pdfs on the class Blackboard page, found under Content.

All will also be required to use the standard history department style guide: Diana Hacker’s Pocket Style Manual, any printed edition or the free online versions at:
http://bcs.bedfordstmartins.com/resdoc5e/RES5e_ch05_o.html

Examples of Chicago Style citations and bibliographic entries:

If students would like some general background on medieval history, Prof. Garver recommends either the tenth or eleventh edition of Judith M. Bennett’s Medieval Europe: A Short History. For students interested in the ways “Game of Thrones” draws upon the Wars of the Roses, Prof. Garver recommends purchasing and reading in its entirety David Grummitt’s A Short History of the Wars of the Roses. The first portion of the book will be available on the Blackboard page because it is assigned as class reading.

Assigned Viewings
Students are responsible for securing their own viewings. This may involve buying DVDs or using VOD services such as Amazon.com or HBO.Go. Note there are no textbook costs for this course.

Quizzes
We will start each class with a short written quiz based on the assigned readings for that day. Students should write quizzes in complete sentences. The two lowest quiz scores will be dropped from the average for the semester. For this reason, students may not request a make-up quiz until their third absence, and in those cases they must present documentation for the necessity of their absence. The professors will give make-up quizzes at times and places of their choosing.

Discussion
This course will consist greatly of class discussions. We expect students to participate in these discussions intelligently and consistently. The best comments are those that demonstrate that you have thought carefully and critically about the GOT episodes and assigned readings for the week. In other words, it is quality of your contributions, not their quantity, that counts most heavily toward your participation grade.

Group Presentations:
These will be 30-minute total presentations complete with PowerPoint/Prezi and clips. Groups will be organized with four members. All members should talk in the presentation and share in the research and design. Each student should submit a bibliography of works consulted (this can be a group effort), an outline of the presentation with slide print-outs, and a short self-evaluation. Topics will be:

1. February 4: The Phenomenon of George Martin
2. February 25: The Historical Background of Disability in Medieval Society
3. March 25: The Production Background of GOT: Sets, Animals, Locations, CGI, Budget
4. April 15: Religion and Spiritualism in GOT and its Antecedents
5. April 29: Fan Culture and GOT

Grades for presentations will be done on an individual basis.

Exams
The midterm and final exams will be take-homes written in term paper style. Page count and topics TBA.

Plagiarism, the representation of the words or ideas of others as one’s own, is fraud. To avoid plagiarism writers are obliged to give credit to others consulted in footnotes and a bibliography. Footnotes or endnotes are used to acknowledge the sources of direct quotations, paraphrases of other authors’ work, and statistical detail. Page citations and notes not only protect against charges of plagiarism, they also demonstrate that additional support exists for the argument being presented and thus make the work more convincing. They also allow readers to follow up on the work of the author. If there is any question about how to handle borrowed words or ideas, it is the student’s responsibility to seek the professors’ guidance.

The Importance of Communication
Communication between professor and students is crucial to a successful semester for everyone. We will be pleased to discuss any student concerns, questions, or interests.

Northern Illinois University is committed to providing an accessible educational environment in collaboration with the Disability Resource Center (DRC). Students who need academic accommodations based on the impact of a disability will be encouraged to contact the DRC if they have not done so already. The DRC is located on the 4th floor of the Health Services Building, and can be reached at 815-753-1303 (V) or drc@niu.edu. If you have a documented disability that may have some impact on your work in this class and for which you require accommodations, please see us as soon as possible so that such accommodations may be arranged in a timely manner. All discussions concerning disabilities will of course remain confidential.

Grading: Midterm 15%, Final 20%, Quizzes 25%, Group Presentation 20%, Participation 20%.
