Asynchronous online courses occur through online channels without real-time interaction and are taught 100% online, but do not have an assigned meeting time for the course. When you register for an asynchronous course in MyNIU, it will indicate the course is online (100%) asynchronous where the "room" is listed. There will not be listed course meeting times.

This interdisciplinary honors seminar is an examination of what work means; how work has been denied in our society in history and today. Students will critically think about their own assumptions of work and how it influences their education and career choices. Please contact Stephanie Kummerer, skummerer@niu.edu for enrollment questions.

Torture & Police Violence.

Torture and police brutality are illegal under international and domestic law but are practiced throughout the world, even in democratic countries. This course begins with case studies of torture by the police in late 20th century Chicago, torture in US-occupied Iraq in the early 21st century, and police violence against African-Americans in contemporary times. It then uses theories from sociology, criminology and social psychology to explain why and how torture and police violence happen. Additional readings examine the history and law of torture, the effects of torture on survivors, perpetrators and societies, and possible solutions to prevent and abolish torture.

The Revolution is Now: Current Protests and Protesters.
The world feels like it's on fire. From protests around police violence, to immigration rights and humanitarian groups protesting the situation on the United State's Southern border, to groups of radicalized white Nationalists storming the nation's Capitol, protest is part of our everyday life in a manner we haven't seen since the 1960's and 1970's. This course will look at the protest and the protesters that are in our world today. While we will anchor on issues of policing/BLM, immigration, and white Supremacists, depending on what happens this summer and fall, we may shift our focus at any time. If you want to understand the tensions in our country, you should take this class.

Rethinking Justice: Alternatives to the Traditional Court System: Over the last fifty years, over 2,000 treatment courts have opened across the United States. We will sociologically examine treatment courts, specifically mental health courts, veteran courts, juvenile and adult drug courts. This course will introduce you to the philosophical and historical backgrounds of these courts. We will examine assumptions about problem solving courts, including crime, justice, punishment, racism, policing, and violence, among a few. Students will explore ways of effectively analyzing outcome effectiveness of different programs and will be required to gain firsthand knowledge by doing assessment of Northern Illinois treatment courts. This course is designed for students who have passed Sociology 377B and Sociology 377A, can pass a background check, and sign a confidentiality statement.

The Etruscans were a vibrant, independent people whose distinct civilization flourished in central Italy for most of the first millennium BCE and whose artistic, social and cultural traditions helped shape the ancient Mediterranean, European, and Classical Worlds. This course surveys Etruscan art and culture, incorporating the most up-to-date research (e.g. DNA findings) and recent archaeological discoveries. In addition to addressing traditional topics, such as architecture, wall painting, ceramics, and sculpture, this course will look at such topics as Etruscan jewelry as an expression of social identity, the important role of women in its society, the supposed "taste" for violence in Etruscan art, the reception of the Etruscans in Greek and Latin literature, and the afterlife of their civilization. To these ends, the course is divided into three parts: (1) a historical introduction, in which we will survey the evidence, general trends and historical development of the Etruscans; (2) thematic topics, in which we will look in depth at particular aspects of their art, society, and culture; and (3) a look at contemporary issues, including the debate over their origins and the impact of looting and the modern antiquities trade on their heritage. ARTH 310F satisfies the PLUS (Society and Culture) requirements, is included in the Origins and Influences Pathway, and has been certified as "Writing Infused."

This course examines human efforts to design more sustainable societies through architecture, urban planning, and inventions of new materials, products, and tools used for daily living from the 18th century to the present. We approach the subject from an art historical point of view, while also taking into account perspectives from the disciplines of other disciplines in the humanities and social sciences. Students will learn from lectures, and close readings of primary and secondary sources, which will be discussed together and reflected upon in a series of critical essays. ARTH 361 satisfies PLUS (Society and Culture) requirements, is included in the Sustainability Pathway, and has been certified as "Writing Infused."

The Destruction of Images/ Images that Destroy: This course examines a historical and global range of image destruction from the perspective of the science of Vision and Visual Psychology. Two questions ground the course: Why has the simple act of seeing works of art and architecture been deemed so powerful and so threatening that it was necessary to destroy the art? How have works of art been designed to psychologically control people in various ways including (but not limited to) intimidation, hate speech, or lessons in inclusivity-exclusivity? Lectures, readings, discussion, and the development of individual research projects that contribute to answering these questions will be part of the course.
